LOCAL NEWS.

C. B. Jenkins has moved into his new house on the corner of Chestnut Street and Punchard Avenue.

W. S. Jenkins has bought of John H. Flint the lot of land and barn situated between the property of A. S. Manning and Jos. A. Smart.

E. S. Gould, who has been employed by the Union Pacific Railroad in Omaha, has returned to town and has some business enterprise in view.

Mrs. Thomas E. Rhodes picked some ripe strawberries in her yard on Elm St., the latter part of last week.

Lincoln Lodge A. O. U. W. is making its meetings very interesting by having debates and other forms of entertainment. There will be a debate next Monday evening on the question "That woman is intellectually the equal of man."

A society of children has been formed at the Free Church called the "Whatsoever Society." It is composed of about twenty children, who sew and make articles for Christmas. A meeting is held once a week in the vestry.

F. H. E. Kendall is shingling the house he occupies on Chestnut St.

Mrs. L. S. Waterman has been making a short visit in town.

The showy Exeter-Andover posters are bringing many complements to the Andover Press.

Prof. Coy of Phillips has been obliged on account of ill health, to give up his duties for a short time and is taking a Southern trip. His many friends outside of the Academy will wish him a speedy recovery to his accustomed vigor. His work is divided between Mr. Terrill and Mr. Ropes of the Seminary.

The annual meeting of the November Club was held on Monday at Abbot Academy Hall, where the club will hold its meetings for the coming year. Reports were read from the several departments, and officers elected.

A number of Andover people attended an informal reception given by Hon. Moses T. Stevens at his palatial residence in North Andover, Wednesday evening.

Rev. J. C. Braeg, Secretary of the American McAll Association, will address a union meeting to be held in the South Church, Thursday evening, Nov. 13. Many will remember Mr. Braeg's last visit to Andover, and the interesting addresses that he gave at the Baptist Church, on Sunday morning and at a union meeting at the South Church in the evening. Last year, Mr. and Mrs. Braeg visited many of the McAll mission stations throughout France, and Mr. Braeg is now on a visiting tour among the American Auxiliaries to stir up our minds by way of remembrance. The Andover Auxiliary asks that he may have the cordial support of the churches.

Joseph F. Cole is to build a cottage on Washington Avenue on the land which he recently purchased of Geo. H. Thwing. John McCarthy will put in the cellar.

Marcus Morton, Jr., the Democratic candidate for representative, spoke at a rally in Billerica Centre, Monday night.

Hardy & Cole have received the contract to erect a building for the Andover Creamery on land purchased of Joshua Chandler in West Parish. Moses Smith of Methuen will put in the foundation. The building will be 26x42 in size and the committee to have charge of the building is Joshua H. Chandler, James B. Abbott, Sumner Carruth, H. S. Robinson.

Michael Shea, formerly employed at the Snow farm, is now at work for D. I. Hadden.

Cornelius Moynihan, an old resident of this town, died last Friday morning at his home on Main Street. He was 50 years old and was quite well known here and in Lawrence, being a respected citizen. The funeral services were held Monday morning at St. Augustine's Church and was very largely attended by his many friends. Interment was in the Catholic Cemetery.

Remember the excellent entertainment in the People's Course next Monday evening. The Germania Orchestra of Boston with George Stuart trombone soloist, assisted by E. K. Hood, humorist.

Rev. Austin H. Burr, formerly pastor of the West Parish Church has begun work at Mystic Bridge, Ct.

J. H. Richardson's horse Twang again secured second money in the 240 race at Rochdale Park, Peabody, last Saturday.

Our readers should notice the announcements of the various Church services for the Sunday to come, which may always be found on page four.

Rev. Frederic Palmer is to repeat his lecture on the "Passion Play," recently given at Christ Church on a stormy evening, next Sunday evening at 7.15.

The cause of the Seamen's Friend Society was placed before the audience at the Free Church last Sunday evening, in a very interesting manner, by Rev. Mr. Snow of Boston.

Rev. W. W. Fay of Westboro' who is to preach at the Free Church next Sunday morning and evening, was a graduate of Phillips Academy in 1876.

Mrs. Corning of Haverhill, the dancing teacher, besides her afternoon class, is to have an evening class in Grand Army Hall. The first lesson will be given next Wednesday evening, from 7.30 to 9.30, and it is important that all who are to attend should be present on the first evening.

The drum corps were taken to North Andover Wednesday night, on Hannon's tally-ho, and serenaded Hon. Moses T. Stevens.

The Y. P. S. C. E. connected with the Free Church held its annual business meeting in the Vestry last evening, a good number being present. The reports of the secretary, treasurer and various committees were read and accepted. The election of officers for the ensuing six months followed. Antoine B. Saunders was elected president; Miss Martha C. Goff, vice-president; Miss Marion L. Scott, secretary; and Charles B. Baldwin, treasurer. After this the meeting dissolved into a social gathering, and various kinds of games and a short entertainment made the evening one of thorough enjoyment.

The Ladies' Society of the South Church had a social gathering in the vestry last evening.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Emily F. Raymond, a notice of whose demise occurs in our death column, will be held at Christ Church, Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

We are sorry to state that Dr. C. W. Scott, on account of ill health, has been obliged to give up practice here. He has made a large number of friends during his stay among us, and all will unite in wishing him a return of good health. He has gone to Tampa, Florida, for the winter, with the hope that the change may be beneficial. Dr. Scott's practice will soon be taken up by Dr. M. E. Smith of North Troy, Vt., who is expected here in a short time. He is recommended by Dr. Scott and is highly spoken of by the people of the town from which he comes. His office will be in Dr. Scott's house, which is now occupied by Fred. C. Wilbur and family.

Rev. P. F. Jernegan's old friends were happy to greet him in town again, having been secured to preach last Sabbath at the Baptist Church. His discourse was an effective one on missions.

The illustrated lecture on the Passion Play, announced as a possibility a week or two ago, will be given in Abbot Academy Hall, Friday evening, Nov. 14, by Dr. Oscar D. Cheney, of Boston. Tickets at thirty-five cents will be on sale at Mr. Cole's Bookstore.

Assistant Inspector Geo. B. Clark, of the Massachusetts G.A.R. will pay an official visit to Fort 99 to-night.

The change of management in the Elm House has caused a removal of the American Express office. It will now be found in the office which has been occupied by Goodhue, the service pipe contractor, the second door after passing around the corner of Valpey's provision store.

Mr. Salsman of Newton Theological Seminary is expected to preach at the Baptist Church next Sabbath.

George A. Parker has purchased of W. S. Jenkins the new house on Bartlett Street, into which he has recently moved.

A new porch has been built on the house of Benjamin Boynton in West Parish by Hardy & Cole.

Miss Carrie Emerson, who is quite well known here, and who went abroad last summer, gave a lecture on a recent evening in Lawrence on England, Scotland, and Ireland.

Dr. R. Massey Howard, who became prominent through our last week's issue, passed Wednesday night in one of the cells of the Police Station. The reason for his being there was for beating his board. Mrs. Robert Hill, at whose house he put up during his stay here, having made a complaint, Chief of Police Cheever found that the "doctor" was in Haverhill, and on Wednesday went there and got him. Judge Poor placed his case on file on the promise that he would settle for the board.

The Drum Corps serenaded Senator-elect Bradley at his home last evening and its members and several others were very pleasantly entertained by Mr. Bradley.

O'Connell Bros. are to build a barn for John D. Driscoll on Park Street.

The family of Geo. S. Holderness has removed to Cambridge.

All the School teachers attended the teacher's institute at Lawrence, last Friday.

Joseph A. Dennison spoke at the Democratic rally in Lawrence last Monday evening.

FOOT BALL.

The Phillips Academy eleven gained another decided victory last Saturday afternoon by defeating the Yale Freshmen team, the score being 17 to 4. Andover played an exceptionally good game in the first half, making all her points in that time. In the second half, she seemed to let up and the Yale boys were enabled to score a touchdown. McCormick, quarterback on last year's Phillips team, played half-back on Yale and is also captain, also McDuffee, centre-rush was on the Phillips eleven last year.

The spectators were much pleased with Andover's playing in the first half, it being a decided improvement and if she can keep it up for a whole game, there is a good chance to gain a victory to-morrow afternoon.

The Technology eleven lined up against the Phillips Academy team Wednesday afternoon and received another defeat, the score being 24 to 0. The Boston representatives were literally not in the game from the start, for Phillips had the kick off and scored a touchdown in the first few minutes. Four more followed before the game ended. Only 37 minutes were played as the Tech. boys were pretty well used up and the captains decided to call the game at this point. Percy Gilbert of this town was referee and William Odlin, umpire.

Andover-Exeter Game.

To-morrow afternoon will come the nearest to being a holiday of any time in the year except a legal holiday. It is the occasion of the annual foot-ball contest between Phillips Andover and Exeter. At this time hardly any business is done in town, and it is expected that a thousand people will witness this great contest. It will take place at 2.30 p.m., on the campus. W. H. Higgins, of the Elm House stables, has five or six coaches and tally-ho's engaged for the occasion, and a lively time may be expected. The teams are said to be evenly matched, and a close and exciting game will probably be the result. The admission to the grounds will be 25 cents.

The Phillips Andover-Exeter games are of more or less interest to a large number of our people, and as the first foot-ball contest for two years is to come off to-morrow it may be interesting to know the result of the past series between these two great preparatory schools. As far as can be learned the first foot-ball game between them was played in 1877, resulting in a tie. Of those played since that time Andover has won seven, and Exeter four. A summary of the games follows:

1878.	P.A. 16; P.E.A. 0.
1879.	P.A. 2; P.E.A. 22.
1880.	P.A. 20; P.E.A. 0.
1881.	P.A. 10; P.E.A. 0.
1882.	P.A. 20; P.E.A. 0.
1883.	P.A. 17; P.E.A. 6.
1884.	P.A. 11; P.E.A. 33.
1885.	P.A. 0; P.E.A. 20.
1887.	P.A. 5; P.E.A. 44.
1888.	P.A. 10; P.E.A. 0.

In the games previous to 1883 the value of the points scored was somewhat different, but the above scores are all reckoned on the method used at the present time. Among those who have gone from Phillips Andover, and become noted in great college contests are: Parrott, Parsons, Rogers, '78; Howard, Reid, '79; Flanders, Bremner, Symons, '80; Harris, Mills, Bradford, '81; Houghton, Wallace, '82; Odlin, Segur, Stearns, '83; Carter, Dennison, '84; Hotchkiss, Mowry, W. Graves, '86; Preston, Funk, C. Bliss, H. Graves, '87; Upton, L. Bliss, '88.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Fair Weather Schools Again.

To the Editor of the Townsman:

I was glad to hear "One of 'em" lift his voice in protest against fair weather schools.

To deny school privileges to the majority because of the few who are either too young or too feeble to attend on stormy days, seems a great injustice; moreover, after years of waiting, we are told that a course of study has been laid out covering a period of nine years; now there will presumably be many stormy days in nine years. If the School Committee have invented or devised any method by which five days' work can be accomplished in four, or, if the elements should prove still more unfavorable, in three—I wish that the public might have the benefit of this discovery or invention as it would be likely to prove an inestimable blessing in other departments of life work. We were also informed through your columns that the standard of our schools had been raised. Is it probable that a higher standard will be maintained with less work than formerly? This is contrary to reason and experience. With the shortened sessions and numerous holidays our children need the stormy days for work. A MOTHER.

One More Stone.

A hasty rush through "Come Forth," a novel lately written by Herbert Ward and E. S. Phelps and published by Houghton & Mifflin, left me with the impression that it was not a book I could read aloud to my father or brother without something of uneasiness. The criticisms in the Literary World for Oct. 11th and another in the Atlantic for November were so severe that I decided to take it up again more carefully. Maybe it was not so hopelessly bad and we could speak a good word for it in the TOWNSMAN, as these authors seem to belong to our "Andover Fame" and were trained in our schools. The publisher's announcement had prepared the public to expect "a remarkable success in avoiding a common fault, that of wounding the sensibilities of the devout—boldly deals with the possibilities of the New Testament characters—the telling, true to the times—spiritual tone of the book firm—the spirit that guides the imagination at all times in full harmony with recorded history—full of exquisite bits—style pure and simple—nothing in the thought or purpose to which the most devout can take exception." The profanity of the book, as a whole, to one trained from youth in the belief of the supreme authority of the Divine Word in the Gospels, is indeed so bold that there will not be much variety of opinion, and it is left for greater heads to discuss. Critics have said that the plot is grossly sensational. Jules Verne certainly attains a greater success with his consistent "Captain Nemo." We can forgive Verne's wildest speculation in science, but in this novel the exact correspondence of the Divine Word between truth and miracle is not followed and viewed merely from the æsthetic standpoint no "greater works" are here set forth.

I know nothing about high art; but as to the "vulgarity of plot," as one critic puts it, there will probably be a great difference of opinion according to one's "organization." It seemed a fair and common sense way to find out what Miss Phelps's own standard of good taste was, and measure the work by it. There is a word in common use from the French—décolleté—literally, open-breasted, probably describing the cutaway vests that society men wear in full dress, and used also for the very low cut bodices of ladies in full evening dress in the same good society. Some people—among whom we find Miss Phelps—have scruples in regard to the propriety of the décolleté gown, and with this for a text, she has sounded the alarm and sallied out in the Forum for August against what she considers the décolleté in modern life. Miss Phelps may not remember that the most womanly, queenly, motherly old "Brahman" of the world, Victoria, is responsible for the present cut of party gowns. Court fashions rule all others in our day. There are many people, besides myself, who are scrupulous in regard to the propriety of décolleté emotions; we cover our eyes, as her ladies are made to do, when at the theatre when great nature or high art pictures to us the sacred in human experiences—even have enough sympathy and veneration for the "Huguenot Lovers"—to wait on the other side of the wall. But custom and the lack of a "highly sensitive organization" has much to do with shaping our opinions in these matters she has brought up. We have all seen children of nature kissing a cat just for the sake of kissing something, and one day I saw a young lady out in the square, kiss a horse. While exercising the greatest toleration towards those heroines whose emotions seek this channel of outflow, many will prefer in pictures of the climax in love affairs, Jane Eyre's old fashioned training of Rochester or the boxing matches of Shirley and Louis Moore. Miss Phelps goes on, "Increased delicacy is the ready proof of increased civilization," accuses us of atavism, and on this supposition—that we really have backed down to the primeval monkey in ideas and behavior—her book is evidently written for a depraved public taste. She says it is possible to treat a coarse subject in a delicate way, and goes on for fourteen pages of the Forum to treat a series of delicate subjects in a "Wardian" way. She justly condemns the faults of the modern stage, but when she meddles with the straightforward eyes of our dear girls, I must protest. In a good sense the revised saying "She that knows nothing, fears nothing," is true of our modern wide-eyed girl. The down cast and shy eye very often belongs to a sly puss like Zahara who flashes in and out of her veil in a way that would excite ridicule in most dear little rowdies of my acquaintance.

She introduces us to one reformed "gay girl" in Martha, who made a "good match" however, just as they do now. Like Nebuchadnezzar in the novel, "Master of Magicians," Martha's ill treatment by these authors excites our fullest sympathy. She brings grave charges against the "gay society girl" whose "Brahman mother's sweet soul" slumbers when she ought to sound the trumpet; who never "questions" and fights valiantly, the lovers out wit him and the sympathy of our authors is never with the outraged parent. Instead of the "midnight parlor" of the "gay girl" flashing with electric light, with transparent pane and lace drapery for the street-side and portieres for the quiet intrusion of our American domestic service on the house-side, Zahara chooses to haunt an unknown underground water conduit, tenanted by rats. When Miss Phelps bears so heavily on the girls and their mothers who prefer the certain wisdom of an upright old family physician in cases requiring nerve and judgment beyond the average female practitioner (as far as she is yet evolved)—how can she defend her introduction of a very susceptible blind lover (a most noble character throughout)—as a day nurse for her young Jewess with the weak spine. His dexterity and delight when allowed to go to the beloved's "sanctuary" for a wrap, are finely drawn.

The book is deficient in descriptions of costume. If we could have a few of the white wool suits and crimson curtains of her former books, we could see these phantoms more clearly. Lazarus was not moved by the exceeding wetness of the robes of Zahara and kept her at the lake shore in that "adhesive" costume for hours and when they recall the father's frenzied search, they saunter along the road home stopping in every shadow for the inevitable "suffocating kiss." "The rare and mighty angel, instantaneous love," had indeed whirled Lazarus and Zahara from a firm footing, and they must not be judged by the standard Miss Phelps sets up for us.

When a very highly organized woman undertakes a story of the passion that consumes both the subject and the object thereof, the result is often more appalling than when the average and sometimes low-toned man-author attempts the task. In the case before us, there was a "collaboration" of forces and the critics, perhaps, are not just toward the man when they advise "a literary divorce as desirable." Some years ago I helped to amuse a gay party of young people with that "infernal" little machine Planchette. The best man I ever knew operated with me in answering questions, but the ribald and profane replies had to go to the flames without report. After vainly striving to convince that man that I did not and could not originate such stuff, and feeling sure that he could not do it, I asked the little tool to tell us who had been controlling it. The fiendish thing promptly rolled forth "the devil!" and I now believe that it was the work of a syndicate of prehistoric ancestral imps. This incident is not related to explain "Come Forth," but is presented as a warning.

Read Miss Phelps's jabs at our modern art and literature. "Imagination pure and simple, lofty and sanctified," is dying out. She dashes at Amelie Rives, charges her with "having been born décolleté" and says the public she tried to please "turns and rends her." One is forced to recall the Scripture: "With what measure ye mete"—when hearing her talk of Tolstoi after having been "beguiled" into reading the last doubtful issue of the poor old man's cracked brain. "Tolstoi's chief mistake—is one of art. His unparalleled fault is one of literary taste."

"Convince the writer of indelicate literature that he is not an artist, but a savage, and he will burn his manuscripts and discover a new literary fashion."

In fear and trembling lest I, in writing this criticism be asked to take this last bit of advice, I sign myself

A GIRL'S CHAMPION.

For Farmers.

"NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS."

Maxims that are true may be no less true and indeed they improve by the years, certainly the one quoted at the head of the article, the poorest day proves it with emphasis. It is only a shorter wording of the declaration in the parable "To him that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance, and from him that hath not shall be taken even that little which he hath."

The farmer, who has achieved the reputation of a first-class product can find market easily for more than he can supply. The artisan who has won fame by any work, is certain to obtain orders for more than he can fill. The child who succeeds in getting first rank at school will secure abundant appointments for special work. In this way, sometimes, the reward obtained is more of a penalty than otherwise.

But the poor fellow who fails in one undertaking finds it difficult to obtain the opportunity to try again, and even if he does, he is un-nerved frequently by his past failure and cannot put sufficient strength into the new work to achieve success. He has to work against great odds, and his chances of failing again increase with each failure. For this reason many fear to venture and hence make certain of failing, when there had been chances of success.

To succeed one must venture and risk much. A while ago a German steamship went to pieces and the captain of the De Ruyter was sent home disgraced because he had lost his vessel, but had he succeeded, when he made his choice of the two courses open to him for selection, he would have made the fastest trip on record and been received with highest honors, upon his return home. The peril remained the same, but a successful result would have been praised while the failure is censured bitterly.

The world is blamable, and it is to be hoped that some day it will recognize this and pay due tribute to effort at the same time failing to praise those who needlessly expose themselves and others to great dangers even though the result is success. Until the world does this, mortals will strive for success, and in this race farmers merit a place.

The progressive farmer will experiment. He will try new breeds of cattle, new strains of stock, and endeavor continually to bring out something better than yet exists and achieve a grand success, but if he will, he will not make his entire work experimental. While aiming to improve his dairy, he will stick to that which has been proven in other lines, for the man who is trying new things at the same time in all branches of work, ventures too much, and if he fails he has nothing to fall back upon. The best rule to adopt is to consider carefully where best to venture, before taking the step, and then proceed boldly, avoiding failure by all possible means and aiming only at the very highest success.—Ploughman.

POTATOES.

To estimate roughly the number of bushels of potatoes in a bin, measure the bin and multiply the dimensions so as to ascertain the number of cubic feet; two-thirds of this cubic contents will be roughly the number of bushels.

One reason why potatoes stored in a pit come out in better order than from the average cellar is because the pit is absolutely dark; another reason is that there is no circulation of air to dry the tubers and wilt them as sometimes happens in cellars. Make your cellars perfectly dark, as cool as may be without freezing and as close as possible, and you will keep your potatoes or other roots almost as well as in a pit with the advantage of being able to get at them for use or market with less trouble than when in a pit. A very little light and air are injurious, the cellar windows should be curtained inside where roots are stored.—Ploughman.

The Congregationalist says

It is curious to note into what confusion some have fallen in respect to topics connected with our denomination which have occasioned much discussion during the last three or four years. Questions of theology and of administering the business affairs of our churches and benevolent societies seem to be hopelessly mixed in their minds. For instance, the Congregationalist has maintained its unqualified dissent from the theory advocated by Andover professors of a possible probation after this life. But it has urged certain changes in the methods of administration of the American Board, not in any way bearing upon theological questions, but likely to restore the full confidence of the churches in its management and renewed enthusiasm in promoting missionary work; and these changes were, in substance, almost unanimously adopted by the board at Minneapolis. But here is a pastor, who no doubt represents others, who regards these entirely distinct matters as the same thing, and appears to mis-conceive both. He does not seem to have been a recent reader of our paper, but forms his judgment from what he has read or heard others say about it. We will let him speak for himself:

I took the Congregationalist for years, but am dissatisfied wholly with its attitude of late on the Andover theology and the American Board question. That theology is un-Biblical, divisive, is not Evangelical, and threatens radically our churches and the best work, if not the very existence, of the American Board. And yet you cater to that theology—put it on the back—half apologize for it.

The Congregationalist has gone back from its old position—turned its coat—wherefore? "Ye did run well; who hath bewitched you?" The "future probation" hypothesis is the half-way house to Universalism, and the Andover virus should be treated with drastic measures—stamped under foot, heel and toe!—W. S. C., in Congregationalist.

Clipped.

An old paper published in 1852 has the following under the head of "Something New": "A mechanic of Cincinnati has built a fire engine to which he attaches steam. The machine was tested a few days ago, and although not in perfect order, steam was raised and water thrown with great rapidity in nine minutes. Five minutes is all the time claimed as essential by the patentee. The experiment was exceedingly satisfactory."

He that whoopeth up his business in the newspaper shall reap a bountiful harvest in golden shekels, says an exchange. He that readeth the advertisements and profiteth thereby shall have an abundance of this world's goods for little money. He that chooseth not to subscribe for his home paper shall wonder at the intelligence of his neighbor. He who advertises liberally gets the cream of the trade.—Malden Press.

London's new government rests upon a franchise so popular that practically nobody who would care to vote is excluded. In the first place, all householders are enfranchised; and this includes every man who rents a place for his family, even if it be only a small room in the garret or the cellar of a tenement house. It also includes those who live within fifteen miles of the metropolis, but own or occupy metropolitan quarters, for any purpose, worth a certain very limited rental. Owners of freehold property in London, no matter where they live, if British subjects, are entitled to vote. Widows and unmarried women who are householders, occupiers or owners of property, are also authorized to vote for county councilors.

The principal basis of the franchise is the household; and the chief disqualifications are receipt of public alms and failure to pay rates that have fallen due. Any resident of the metropolis or vicinity who is entitled to vote is eligible to election. Furthermore, any British subject who owns land in London, or who is possessed of a limited amount of property, no matter where he lives, may be chosen a councillor of the county of London. The fact of residence in one district does not disqualify, either in law or in the popular judgment, for candidacy in another district.—Century.

Book Notices.

The Treasury for Pastor and People is on our table for November. The number is a superior one in all respects. No magazine of its class excels the Treasury in helpfulness to preachers and workers aiming to win souls for Christ. Its matter is fresh, varied, excellent and always abreast of the times on the right lines. This number has as a frontispiece, the portrait of the Rev. B. D. Sinclair, pastor of the "Old South" Church, Newburyport, Mass., in which G. Whitefield preached and in which his remains are interred. A fine cut of the church is also given. The sermon by the present pastor and the sketch of his life are very interesting. This with leading thoughts of Sermons, bright editorials, Expositions of Sunday-school Lessons, with other excellent matter, make up a number of unusual excellence.

Yearly, $2.50. Clergymen, $2. Single copies, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

Century magazine celebrates its twentieth anniversary with the November number, a number which is intended to exemplify the best that an illustrated magazine of our day can do for its innumerable readers. In the editorial on the event the editor claims for the Century "a sane and earnest Americanism" an Americanism "that deems the best of the Old World none too good for the New." Instead of viewing at length the literary and artistic achievements of the magazine the editor considers it best to celebrate the astonishing progress in magazine printing during the past twenty years in an illustrated article by Theodore L. De Vinne of the De Vinne Press.

There is a profusion and variety in the illustration of the November number which is remarkable even for the Century, varying from the artistic reproduction of rapid pen work to the exquisite engraving of Cole in the "Old Master" series, (a full-page after Signorelli). Terms: $4.00 a year in advance, 35 cents a number. Century Co., Union Square, New York.

The new serial, by Frank R. Stockton, author of "Rudder Grange," which opens the Atlantic Monthly for November, is entitled "The House of Martha." It abounds in that dry, whimsical humor, which is so difficult to analyze, and yet so easy to enjoy. The short parts which make up this instalment are called "My Grandmother and I," "Relating to my year in Europe," "The modern use of the human ear," "I obtain a Listener," "My Understudy," "My Book," "The Malarial adjunct" (the latter being the invalid husband of an amanuensis). The romantic title, "Along the Frontier of Proteus's Realm," comes rather strangely after Mr. Stockton's delightfully matter-of-fact humor. The paper with this title is by Edith Thomas, and is a charming description of the sea in its various moods, enlivened by verses of which Miss Thomas is apparently the author, and other good things. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

SUPPORT YOUR LOCAL PAPER.

Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1890, will be a memorable day in the annals of the history of elections in America. Never in the history of Massachusetts has so much of the unexpected happened in the state election. Democracy has prevailed in a way that brings many suggestions with its triumphs, and the Republican party is sure to pay heed to them. Seven congressmen in place of two, a state senate almost equally divided, and a legislature showing large Democratic gains, is the summary of the result. Why is it so? Many answers are made to this query but the reason nearest to the real cause seems to us to be that the people were unduly scared at the cries of the opponents of the new tariff law. As was noted last week, the misrepresentation in the campaign just closed has been almost without parallel. It has borne its fruit in an overthrow that is a sad one for the fallen, and what may be a troublesome one for the victors. All laws that make radical changes in the nation's affairs as did the McKinley tariff bill, are hard for the people at large to understand. The new tariff bill was made even more confusing, by many unscrupulous dealers changing their prices for what was undoubtedly nothing else than political effect. A man who had traded for years with a clothier whom he trusted, found it hard to gainsay the cry of increased cost of living when that clothier asked him more for his coat! A hundred arguments, in favor of a law could not outweigh the effect of such a practical illustration against it. We believe that the law will yet meet with approval. It is to-day under the ban, but its many excellent features, its promise of reduction on necessities to be a fact next spring, are sure to bring about a better feeling toward the party who are its authors. Meanwhile the country is safe. There will come no dire calamity because of Democratic rule. Massachusetts has had some most excellent governors in the past, and we believe that Governor-elect Russell will prove to be a worthy successor in the line. It is a noticeable fact that sixteen years ago the Democrats elected Governor Gaston, and eight years ago they elected Governor Butler. Can it be that Massachusetts needs such discipline every eight years?

The result in our Congressional district is almost the highest compliment which could be paid to the successful candidate, Hon. Moses T. Stevens. Nominated by the Democrats in their desire to place before the people a clear and able man, he has not been left behind in the final victory of his party. No newspaper, no convention, no political prophet, has predicted anything further than a handsome vote for Mr. Stevens. He has made no speeches and no promises, and while the general tide may have had something to do with his election, we prefer to believe that the upright and successful life of many years had even more. Especially is this true in Andover and North Andover where Mr. Stevens easily led his ticket. The papers say very truly that Mr. Greenhalge's retirement is a national loss, but Mr. Greenhalge is not retired for long. Ability like that possessed by him is not allowed to slumber or be set back by a single reverse. He is one of Massachusetts' brightest men and is sure to keep in the front rank.

The Senatorial vote was expected to be close, but the result is another surprise. Mr. Bradley tried hard to get elected and so did Mr. Rowell. Mr. Bradley was credited with being an able legislator. At the last session, and his largely increased plurality shows that the majority of the voters of the sixth district wished his return. He has reason to feel especially proud of the handsome vote given him by his townspeople.

The West Andover fire on Monday night emphasizes the need of providing some way in which to use the water that is so well distributed over our town. Many persons have been apt to consider not only the centre, but the greater part of West Parish, well protected from fire, but they have overlooked the fact that water in cast iron pipes underground, will not put out a fire. It is a great question whether or not the efficiency of the fire department would not be much greater with several hose companies, than it is with the two steamers and one hose company.

We have the steamers and it would be unwise to dispose of them, but a need, that cannot with wisdom be denied, must ere long be filled in the establishment at various stations in the outer districts, hand hose carts, that can be easily and quickly brought into use by neighborhood organizations. West Parish should certainly have such an appliance.

May we again remind our readers that the editors of the TOWNSMAN do not hold themselves responsible for anything published in our columns under "Communications," or signed articles. We are glad to publish anything and everything of public interest that is courteous in tone and signed by the writer's real name as a guarantee of good faith (any signature may be used for publication.) If our readers will remember this and lay at our door only that which comes under editorial or news they will not attribute to us quite so much that we do not care to be held responsible for.

The condensed news and more extended news happenings chronicled in our inside pages are coming to be much liked by busy people who cannot find time to read the full accounts of the world's doings in the daily papers. We believe many of our readers would find much more in the TOWNSMAN if they would remember these inside pages

To the Editor of the Townsman:

I am not an Andover Townsman, but I have occasion to drive through Salem Street almost every day of the year. I am pleased to see the improvement your Commissioner is making on that street. I hope he will go a little further, a little way beyond the water tank, and remove two large stones opposite the guide post, that wagon wheels will strike most unmercifully. At times when the road has been repaired, a piece of turf has been placed on each side to help the wheels over. How shiftless! Why cannot the stones be dug out or broken off? Will it cost too much, or why is "this thus?"

J. R. LEWIS.

Andover, Nov. 5.

Fire in West Parish.

A bright red light in the southwestern sky Monday evening, about six o'clock, attracted considerable attention and the cause for it was soon divined by the ringing of the fire bell. There was a great difference of opinion as to where it was, though it was finally concluded that it was in West Parish. The fire department answered promptly and took the road by Hartwell Abbott's home, thinking it was more to the left than it really was. It was soon found, however, that the blaze, which was a very bright one and seen from miles around, was caused by the burning of the two-story dwelling house and barn of Eugene Jefferson, on the Andover road, near Haggotts Pond. The fire had gained too much headway for the steamer to be of much use, and the buildings were totally destroyed, though some furniture was saved.

The fire was caused by Mr. Jefferson going into the barn with a lantern and upsetting it in some hay. A cow and horse which were in the barn were got out, but several hens were burned. The loss is placed at $4,000, insured for $2,000 in the Middlesex Mutual of Lowell, through the agency of H. C. Church & Son.

Another Burglary.

Last Friday night our town was given another visit by burglars, the residence of H. S. Robinson, on the Hill, being broken into. Entrance was gained by turning the key in the door with nippers, and by removing the trampoline through a hole which had been bored through the door. Chief of Police Cheever was notified Saturday morning, but has found no trace of the miscreants. The following articles were stolen: 1 dozen tea spoons marked R; 5 dessert spoons marked R; 1 table spoon marked R; 1 jelly spoon marked R; 1 sugar spoon marked R; 1 salt spoon marked R; 1 pair sugar tongs marked R; 1 table spoon marked S.B.M.; 1 dessert spoon marked Muzzy; 1 dessert spoon marked Rosabella; 1 salt spoon marked M.R.; 1 mustard spoon marked M.R. or Muzzy; 1 small fork marked M.R.; 1 napkin ring marked John Alden; 1 napkin ring marked Rosie; ebony cane, gold headed, marked H.S.R.; and a small sum of money.

New Landlords.

The old and familiar Mansion House that has sheltered so many men great in all branches of the world's fame, has a new landlord. So long as the pleasant smile and careful attention of Mr. Carter were a part of the good cheer of this famous hostelry, it mattered not where the house was, and the destruction of the old historic inn only served to open up a cozier and pleasanter house at the Stowe cottage. Mr. Carter's retirement will be regretted by very many. He has been landlord of the Mansion House many years, and has made hosts of friends. His reminiscences of men and events on the hill for the past two decades, would be very interesting. The choice of his successor takes off some of the regret at his departure. Mr. E. P. Hitchcock, the new landlord, has had much hotel experience, and possesses the genial, pleasant characteristics of the popular landlord. Mr. Carter is to occupy his "Highland Cottage."

The change in the hotel proprietorship in this town is not confined to the Mansion house, for A. F. Wilbur has sold his right and property in the Elm House to Mr. Parker Spinney of Boston. Mr. Wilbur has run the Elm House for nearly six years and his friends will regret to learn that he has given it up. He will remain here for a while. Mr. Spinney, who has taken charge, is a well known hotel man, having owned and run the Merrimac House in Boston for thirty years. He is a genial and accommodating gentleman and will make many friends here who will wish him success.

Reception to Mrs. Mead formerly of Abbot Academy.

The Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association of Boston met at the Thorndike Saturday for the first of the three gatherings which they hold each year.

The occasion was a reception to Mrs. Elizabeth S. Mead, recently a teacher in Abbot Academy and the new president of Mount Holyoke. The reception was followed by a dinner, at which Miss Eastman presided, and eloquent and witty addresses were made by Mrs. Mead, Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, Henry D. Hyde, Dr. Webb, Rev. Alexander McKenzie, Dr. Judson Smith, Hon. Jonathan Lane, Mrs. Elizabeth Fessenden and others. Among others of the guests were Miss Johnson of Bradford Academy, Miss A. E. Stanton of Wheaton Seminary, Miss Philena McKeen of Andover, Miss Lord, Mrs. Pauline A. Durant and others from Wellesley, ex-Gov. and Mrs. Claflin.

George Riddle.

A select, but not very large audience gathered in the Town Hall last Friday night to listen to readings by George Riddle. Mr. Riddle has appeared in town on previous occasions and has never failed to give the greatest satisfaction and pleasure to his hearers. This time was no exception, and it is regretted that more did not hear him. He has a very pleasing voice and manner, and by the realistic way in which he assumes the different characters of his pieces, at once enlists the sympathies of his audience. The changes in his facial expressions were very good. "A piece of red calico," "Marc Antony and the Roman citizen," and "The Sleeping Car," were perhaps the selections which most delighted the audience.

CINDERS.

Charley—"I must be full of electricity. If I stroke our cat a little, all her hairs seem to stand on end." Johnnie—"That's nothing. My dog does that without touching the cat at all."—Teas Siftings.

"What's in a name?" asked Biggs the other day, in the course of conversation. "I guess your wife can tell you," said Boggs. "What do mean?" "Why, everything you've got is in her name, isn't it?"—Puck.

Lord Noodleby—"But I don't understand it exactly. How can it be that while you are heir-apparent to the Presidency is alive, this Mr. McKee sits upon the throne?" His Host—"There is no heir to the Presidency, my Lord." Lord Noodleby—"Then this Mr. Lincoln in London is an impostor?"—Puck.

A prominent gentleman remarked Wednesday morning as he bought a newspaper, in Chandler's store, "Methinks I hear a rattle (Russell) in the Autumn leaves."

Did you see a town committee, With their schemes all laid to win, At a rally in a city, Seats in front and all a grin.

How they claimed 'twas two and fifty For a lead they'd surely gain! But the chickens they had counted, Didn't hatch, like down in Maine.

When the vote had all been counted, Ah, alas! the figures true, Told the Solons of the party 'Twas a one and not a two.

A SYMPATHIZER.

The Democrats did hustle And elected Governor Russell, Sing the the tariff low, Or high, we do not know.

The Republicans to crack it, Had a nut on Governor Brackett, Sing the tariff high, It swamped him, don't you know.

White and blue are the colors which delight the P.A. students, and they are making piles of badges and banners for to-morrow. One of the boys had his blue and wanted some white paint or other substance to decorate it with. A long hunt failed to find what he desired. He called for white lamp-black.

The happiness of your life depends upon the character of your thought.

What is really best for us lies always within our reach, though often overlooked.

Frye Village.

F. P. Johnson of the Seminary spoke in the Hall last Sunday evening, on the text Matt. 6:33.

Andrew Callum and family of Merrimac spent Sunday at David Mitchell's.

Tickets for the minstrel show are selling rapidly. Those who haven't done so should secure them early.

Harky & Cole are abingling the house occupied by Miss Agnes Smith.

There was a very pleasant social gathering at the home of Silas Doble last Saturday evening.

The stage in the Hall has been repaired and the new curtains will probably be put up this week.

Mrs. Peter Wilcox and family of Haverhill were visiting at Mrs. Robb's this week.

Mr. Wm. Poor took over the road last Wednesday, a new meat wagon to Nashua. This is the third one he has delivered there since July 1st. He left at 3 A.M. and returned at 3 P.M., making a round trip of 50 miles with his horse, a pretty good day's work for a man over 80 years old.

The Sewing School will open on Saturday, Nov. 8, at 2.30, in the basement of the Hall in Abbott Village. Any girls over six years of age are welcome.

William Atwood, formerly gardener at the home of G. W. W. Dove, left town yesterday for Winnipeg, Canada to spend the winter.

Superintendent of Streets Lovejoy is improving the sidewalk between Poor's shop and Thomas David's, by raising it considerably. It is just what was needed.

An electric light pole has been placed near the house of James Soutar and the arc light in the centre will be swung between the two poles.

THE LOCAL ELECTION.

Stevens, Bradley and Greene Elected.

Tuesday was a splendid day for election, there being a cool, bracing air and a bright sun. In fact, everything was conducive to a large vote and it was a good vote for what is termed an off year, 690 votes being cast in Precinct 1, and 178 in Precinct 2, making a total of 877, 46 more than last year.

The Australian system of voting again proved a success, and showed that people used it more intelligently this year, as there were a great many less blanks in the general vote.

On the amendment questions, there were a large number of blanks, caused either by a lack of desire to vote on them, or by not having an intelligent understanding of their purpose.

Again everything went off very quietly, there being no unusual stir except, perhaps, the number of teams outside hustling after voters. A few required assistance in marking their ballots, and one or two were deposited without being marked. It was some after 9 o'clock when the polls were opened, and the first voters, contrary to the usual order of things, were young men instead of old. W. A. Duley and A. L. Rhodes cast the first votes. The voting was very steady, there being at no time any great rush except from 12 to 1.30.

The polls were closed promptly at 4.30, and the work of counting began directly. This was accomplished much quicker than last year, and soon after 7.50, Warden John H. Flint announced the result to many anxious listeners. It was as follows:

Election Notes.

After the election of Senator Bradley was known for a certainty, a crowd of his friends got M. Hannon with the tally-ho to drive to Lawrence, blowing horns and shouting over their victory.

Constable Geo. F. Cheever had charge of Precinct 1, and M. T. Welch of Precinct 2.

Lyle furnished oysters and coffee for the election officers at 6.30 P.M.

Geo. A. Marden, the Republican treasurer-elect, received the most votes for a republican candidate in this town, 408. Of the democratic candidates Moses T. Stevens had the largest number 351.

The workers for both parties were busy and kept the teams "hustling" for voters. Senator Bradley's vote in this town was a surprise to everyone, democrats and republicans alike.

Abbott Village.

The game between the Andovers and Lawrence Athletics, at Lawrence, last Saturday resulted in the defeat of the Andovers by 5 goals to 3. Andover wanted Rogers and Smith from their forward line. The game was very evenly contested, especially in the second half, both teams scoring two goals. J. Smith, D. Bruce, and J. Buchanan played a good game for Andover. In the three games played Lawrence has won two and Andover one. Goals, 11-20.

The Cricket Club will hold a concert and dance, date to be announced later.

Mrs. Mary Cox has left town and gone to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Alex. Anderson, at Hyde Park.

The annual meeting of the A.C.C. was held in the Club House Tuesday evening. The reports for the year were read, and showed the club to be in good condition. Pres. Warden and Secretary and Treasurer Christie did not stand for another year. All the other officers were re-elected. President, Wm. Coutts; vice-President, Jas. C. Low; Secretary, Barnett Rogers; Treasurer, A. B. Saunders; Executive Committee, H. Kydd, J. S. Harris, and D. F. Bruce, Capt. Secretary's address, Box 345, Andover, Mass.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Ann Bushfield whose death occurred last Friday, were held Sunday afternoon and were attended by many friends. Rev. Frederic Palmer officiated. The deceased had been in this country for over 36 years, coming from Scotland, and she was much respected by the community. Interment was in the Episcopal Cemetery.

The sewing School will open on Saturday, Nov. 8, at 2.30, in the basement of the Hall in Abbott Village. Any girls over six years of age are welcome.

BALLARDVALE.

Misses Ayer, Clemons, and Brown of the local staff of teachers attended a Teachers' Institute at Lawrence last Friday, the schools being closed. Prominent educators contributed valuable papers on teaching.

The Epworth League will elect officers at their annual meeting next Thursday evening.

M. E. Clemons reports business rushing at his shop in Attleboro'. He has lately put a switch on the market of his own invention which is said to surpass any on the market.

Mr. Pervin Parkhurst, of Dedham, a brother-in-law of Mr. E. F. Sisco will move here the coming week.

Messrs. Holder and Walker of Salem gave a very pretty series of stereopticon views at the Methodist Church last Monday evening. The audience was not as large as it would have been had the affair been advertised more thoroughly, but it deserved a far better turnout, for the views were really of the highest order. Mr. Holder himself taking them all from masterpieces in sculpture and painting. The dissolving views and colored effects are spoken of as beautiful, a representation of "Night" being especially so. Some excellent music vocal and instrumental, formed a part of the programme. The entertainment will undoubtedly be repeated at an early date.

Mr. P. J. Scott has bought the house occupied by Mrs. Frye, and will move into it as soon as it is vacated. Many friends, made in a long residence here, will regret to learn that Mrs. Frye leaves town to make her home in Malden with her sister. Her household goods will be sold at auction Saturday.

W. F. Parker has moved into the house on Andover Street, where Rev. Mr. Butler has been living.

The Bradlee Course opened Wednesday evening, as announced, with a concert by the Bostonian Male Quartette assisted by Miss Ella M. Chamberlain the whistling soloist. Mr. H. F. Wilson, as committee, stated before the concert commenced that every effort had been made to have the course a success, and said that all the donor and the committee desired was to have the same good order preserved that had characterized previous entertainments. The audience were lavish in their applause and it seemed like imposing on good nature to compel Miss Chamberlain to respond to so many eulogies. Her rendition of the "Mocking Bird" and the selection from "Erminie" were perhaps best adapted to show her truly wonderful ability. Nearly all the imitators of birds and whistlers of ordinary grades use an instrument concealed in the mouth, but Miss Chamberlain depends only upon her lips to produce the marvellously clear tones which make her performance what it is. The quartette were recalled several times, and Miss Ock the pianist was obliged to repeat her piano solo.

Mrs. Nathan Shattuck has among other plants not common an orange tree which bears several oranges of good size, also a magnolia, which was in blossom a short time since.

The J. P. Bradlee Engine Co. appointed, Monday evening, a committee to make arrangements for their Thanksgiving eve ball.

Wm. Froesch has returned from a trip through Connecticut, visiting Hartford and Meriden.

Henry Clukey is acting as agent for a much advertised "microbe killer."

Hallowe'en was observed with more than the usual amount of mischievousness on the part of the boys. Bells were rung, gates unhung, and similar idiotic attempts to be funny perpetrated about town.

Everything was quiet around the polling place Tuesday, and not much interest was manifested except by a few partisans acting in the interest of certain candidates.

A liberal reward will be paid for any information as to the whereabouts of a banner carried about town one night two years ago inscribed with words to the effect that the bearer was "glad and jolly." Apply at the north gatehouse of the Craighead & Kintz Co.

Miss Nellie Buck, in charge of the Intermediate room of the school, has been compelled to resign on account of poor health. Miss Buck has been a faithful teacher, and parents and scholars hope that she soon may be able to resume her duties. Miss Carter of Boston has taken Miss Buck's place.

H. R. Ladd is having incandescent lights put into the box shop.

H. H. Appleman spent Sunday last in Wrentham.

Mrs. Silas Buck is recovering from a serious illness.

Next Sunday at the Methodist Church a ballot will be taken on the question of admitting woman delegates to the general conference.

William Lawrence Jr., is called the best political prophet in town. He predicted Bradley's vote within one or two, and did nearly as well on the other candidates.

The Engine stood according to this morning's Globe tenth in the list with 1225 votes. They are still in the field and are working earnestly.

Mr. Albert Clemons is having the grounds around his new house laid out.

AFTER THE BATTLE

M'KINLEY IS DEFEATED.

Head of Ohio Ticket Has a Plurality of 10,000.

KANSAS HAS A LANDSLIDE.

Both Parties Claim Minnesota—Democrat Governor of Pennsylvania by Over 10,000—Result in Illinois is Still in Doubt—No Choice for Governor in New Hampshire, and the Legislature is Very Close—Latest Figures Regarding the Vote in Massachusetts—Further Election Returns from Different Sections of the Country.

The returns from the outside states come in very slowly. Those from the Pacific slope show gains for the Republicans. The western states, however, increase the Democratic vote, while the south holds its solid position in the Democratic column.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—The final footings of the vote of Tuesday in this state shows that the plurality for Governor Russell falls but a trifle short of 10,000 and the congressional candidates, including Mr. Coolidge in the eleventh district, have safe margins.

Gonod is still lacking. The total vote of the state reported is:

Russell, Dem. 141,746

Brackett, Rep. 131,806

McMurry, Pro. 18,815

Total 272,367

Russell's plurality 10,940

Ballot's plurality 3,854

The total vote is the largest ever cast in this state, except in the 2 presidential elections of 1884 and 1888, and the year when Butler was beaten, in 1883. An analysis of the returns shows that Mr. Russell made his gains about evenly in city and country, swelling his total vote all over the state as compared with last year.

It appears that Mr. Russell gained about 5000 votes in Boston, 7400 in the other cities and 8000 in the country towns, while Mr. Brackett lost 3400 in Boston and gained 3700 in the other cities and 5300 in the country towns.

It would seem from the substantial plurality given to Lieutenant Governor Hille that the Republican state ticket had been chosen. This is probably true of Mr. Marden, the candidate for treasurer, and Col. Olin, the candidate for secretary, but there may be a doubt about Mr. Pillsbury, the candidate for attorney general.

It is hardly probable that either Mr. Marden or Col. Olin has so large a vote as Lieutenant Governor Hille, although their plurality may prove as large from the failure of some of the voters fully to mark their tickets.

There was considerable feeling against Mr. Pillsbury because he took the nomination away from a man in the western part of the state, and if Attorney General Waterman's friends carried their feeling to the polls they may have elected Mr. Maynard, the Democratic candidate.

The probabilities, however, rather favor Mr. Pillsbury. Mr. Trevelyan, the Democratic candidate for auditor, is undoubtedly elected by a safe margin.

The list of congressmen elected in this state still stands: Dem., 7; Rep., 5; although a desperate effort is being made to figure out a majority for Mr. Spaulding in the 11th district. The pluralities are as follows:

First—Randall, Rep. 2,078
Second—Noyes, Rep. 1,328
Third—Andrew, Dem. 3,877
Fourth—O'Neil, Dem. 7,906
Fifth—Hear, Dem. 2,859
Sixth—Lodge, Rep. 1,021
Seventh—Coxwell, Rep. 1,612
Eighth—Stevens, Dem. 502
Ninth—Williams, Dem. 198
Tenth—Walker, Rep. 660
Eleventh—Coolidge, Dem. 115
Twelfth—Crosby, Dem. 283

The plurality given to George Fred Williams in the 9th congressional district seems to be 188. Mr. Williams yesterday morning made a tabulation covering every town and showing a plurality of 195. A correction of the vote in Lincoln increased his total by 11 and reduced Mr. Candler's by 4 votes, while the correct figures from Ashland increased Mr. Williams 27 and Mr. Candler 39.

BOTH CLAIM IT.

Neither Republicans or Democrats are willing to concede Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The full vote of Illinois, official, unofficial and estimated, indicates the election of Amberg, Rep., for state treasurer by about 10,000 over Wilson, Dem. Edwards, Rep., for superintendent of public instruction, has a plurality of 8000 over Raab, Dem.

The Republican state central committee insists that it will control the general assembly by 5 or 6 on joint ballot; but the Democrats as vigorously claim they will have a majority of 1 to throw. The result is still in doubt and must remain so until the official returns are in, although the probabilities are that the Republicans will have a bare majority on joint ballot.

One of the disappointments of the Democrats has been the failure to carry all the doubtful Cook county districts. Had they done as well in the city of Chicago as in the state a Democratic general assembly would have been the result. But even as it is now, both sides will claim the victory until the official canvass determines the result in the dozen doubtful districts of Chicago and the state. The house will certainly be very close, with the chances in favor of the Democrats on the face of the incomplete returns.

Latest returns from the 16th congressional district of Illinois indicate that the Democratic congressman, Fithian, has been defeated by Reeder, the Farmers' Mutual Benefit association candidate, by a majority of 330. This is probably correct, and will leave the Illinois delegation: 11 Democrats, 8 Republicans, and 1 Farmers' M. B. A.

Congressman J. C. Cannon telegraphs from Danville, Ill., that his Democratic opponent has 300 majority.

Congressman Rowell, Rep., of the 14th district, failed to secure re-election. His opponent carried the district by 300 votes. Congressman Hitt, Rep., of the 6th district was re-elected by a majority of 1000. This shows a falling off of 1800 votes from his last election.

Complete unofficial returns from all the counties in the congressional district give Bussey a plurality over Cannon of between 500 and 600.

Twelve Republicans and 8 Democrats are elected from Illinois.

Congressman Fithian of the 16th district telegraphs The Associated Press that complete returns will show his election by 500 plurality.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Nov. 6.—It is probable that Snow has defeated Payson, Rep., for congress in the 9th district by 800 to 400.

Blame Laid on McKinley.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Senator C. B. Farwell says: "If we have suffered defeat it is owing to three things: the McKinley bill, the Farmers' Alliance and the school law. There is no use denying but that the people are wonderfully prejudiced against the McKinley bill, and many Republicans seized upon the opportunity of showing their disapproval of this law. The McKinley bill is all right, but the people have to be educated up to it, that is all. This bill has been a great scare-crow for the Democrats, and some Republicans are weak-kneed enough to believe in the scare. It will take time to get the people to fully understand this law, but when they do there will be a landslide the other way."

Chairman A. M. Jones of the Republican state central committee, speaking of the result in this state said, "I tell you we will do well if we come out of the fight with our hide. It is due to the school house issue."

M'KINLEY DEFEATED.

Ohio Will Send Fourteen Democrats and Seven Republicans to Congress.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—The Republican state committee, on unofficial returns received from 75 counties, and the balance estimated, claim the Republican plurality on the head of the state ticket will be between 14,000 and 15,000. The committee concedes the defeat of McKinley, Rep., for congress by 300, and Foster, Rep., by 75 or 100. The Democratic candidates in the other close congressional districts received majorities ranging from 500 upward, with the exception of Congrove at Cincinnati, who is defeated by Storor, Rep., by 2700. One of the most remarkable Democratic gains was in the 11th district, where Pattison, Dem., was elected by 3100, with a gain of 1500 over last fall's vote. The Republican committee concedes the delegation to congress will stand 7 Republicans to 14 Democrats.

On the returns received on private advice the Democratic committee estimates the Republican plurality on the head of the ticket will be about 10,000, and think it may fall below these figures. On unofficial figures they claim McKinley is defeated by 315, and Foster by 300 or 400. Their estimate as to the numerical standing of the congressional delegation is the same as that of the Republican committee.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—According to the returns so far received, the Ohio congressional delegation will be 7 Republicans and 14 Democrats. At this writing, however, the election of Hare and Warwick is not established by complete returns, and the apparent majority in each case is so small as to make it unsafe to claim an election until the official count is made. From official and unofficial returns received from all the counties of the state, except 10, and estimating that the same as last year on the vote for governor, the plurality of D. J. Ryan, Republican candidate for secretary of state is 13,120.

WOOSTER, O., Nov. 6.—According to returns received by the Democrats, Warwick will have 391 majority over McKinley. The chairman of the Republican committee says Warwick will not have over 380.

Calvin Brice is Happy.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Senator S. Brice telegraphs Chairman Phelps of the state central Democratic committee: "Congratulations. Ohio elects 14 Democratic congressmen, a gain of 9. McKinley and Foster both defeated."

NO CHOICE FOR GOVERNOR.

New Hampshire Legislature Must Elect the Chief Executive.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 6.—Returns from all but 26 towns in the state give Tuttle, Rep., for governor, 59,181; Amosen, Dem., 38,427; Fletcher, Pro., 1283. In 1888 these 26 towns gave Gooder, Rep., 2355; Amosen, Dem., 2673; Carr, Pro., 68. In 309 cities and towns Tuttle leads Amosen 704. There will be no choice and the legislature will elect. John M. Tyler of Claremont, Henry M. Quimby of Gifford and George C. Ramsdell of Nashua, Reps., and E. C. Lewis of Laconia, Dem., are elected councillors.

There is no choice in the first congressional district. The Republican, elect 13 senators and the Democrats 8. There is certainly no choice in the Winnipiscogee and Sebago worth districts, and probably none in the Londonderry district. The house is very close; both parties claiming it by a small majority.

McKinley, Dem., carries the first congressional district by a good plurality, and Daniel, Dem., the second by a very narrow margin.

HOW KANSAS VOTED.

An Overwhelming Defeat for Republicans—Senator Ingalls' Chances.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 6.—There has been a veritable landslide in Kansas and the Republican majority of 82,000 has disappeared. Returns, practically complete, elect Willits, Farmers' Alliance, governor. Only 4 of the 7 Republican congressmen, F. H. Funston, is returned, and the delegation will stand: Rep. 1, Dem. 1, F. A. 5. Another surprise lies in the possible defeat for re-election of Senator Ingalls, whose term expires in 1891. The F. A. and the Democrats waged a bitter campaign against the Republican candidate. The result is the certain election of 95 F. A. and Democratic legislators, against 30 Republicans. Some of the Farmers and Democrats may vote for Ingalls, but his opposition claims that those newly elected who oppose him, together with the opposition hold-overs, will give amply 50 votes, or a majority of 6 against him. This now looks to be a correct statement of the Ingalls situation, but it is liable to modification.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 6.—The Topeka Capital (Rep.) sends the following dispatch to the Associated Press: The state returns have a decided look for Willits and the defeat of 3 and possibly 4 of the Republican congressmen. The chairman of the People's party claims to have received returns from 100,000 voters, which would give Willits 1000 plurality. The Republican committee claims that on joint ballot in the legislature Ingalls will have a majority.

Davis, Ind., and F. A. will be elected to congress in the 5th district by about 5000 plurality.

MINNESOTA IS UNCERTAIN.

Republicans and Democrats Both Insist That They Have Won.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 6.—Full returns and carefully prepared estimates from 49 of the 79 counties in Minnesota give 1672 plurality for Wilson, Dem., for governor. The counties heard from include the four big counties which gave strong votes against Merriam, while those yet to be reported are mostly Republican. It is also claimed that the greatest of the Alliance strength has been included in the counties already reported. For these reasons the Republican committee still claim the election of Merriam by about 1000 plurality, but the Democrats are equally sure of the state for Wilson by from 1000 to 2000. As to congressmen, it seems probable that 3 of the 5 are Democrats, and that party also claim the 5th district, from which but scattering returns have been received in many counties. Nothing complete has been received from the legislature, but the Republicans claim a small majority.

BOTH PARTIES SURPRISED.

Democrats Sweep West Virginia—State Senate Probably a Tie.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 6.—The indications are that the Democratic tide wave has taken West Virginia in its course, and that that party has made a clean sweep. Hubbard, Rep., for congress in the 1st district, has been defeated by fully 500 majority. The district is Republican, but apathy on the part of the party in Harrison and Marshall counties, two Republican strongholds, did the business. Their showing is a surprise to both parties. Smith, Rep., for congress in the 4th district, still claims his election by a small majority. The state senate will probably be a tie, which will prevent a gerrymander of the state by either party.

THE PENNSYLVANIA SURPRISE.

It is Now Said That Pattison's Plurality Will Be Over 10,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—The latest returns from the 28 congressional districts of this state show the election of 18 Republicans and 10 Democrats. The present delegation from this state stands 31 Republicans and 7 Democrats.

Complete but unofficial returns from every county in the state give Pattison, Dem., for governor, a plurality of 16,399 over Delamater, Rep. The Republican candidates for lieutenant governor and secretary of internal affairs, Messrs. Waters and Stewart, are no doubt elected, as both ran far ahead of Delamater in nearly every county.

BY BIG MAJORITIES.

Indiana Democrats Elect the Entire State Ticket—One Congressman Gained.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 6.—Reports from all parts of the state show that the election has been a veritable landslide. The entire Democratic state ticket is elected by big majorities, and Chairman Michener of the Republican committee concedes the defeat of his party by about 15,000. The Democrats claim a majority of about 17,343 on the state ticket, that they have elected 11 of the 13 congressmen, a gain of 1, and that in the legislature they will have a majority of 62 on joint ballot.

Doubtful Returns from Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 6.—The elections of W. J. Bryan, Dem., over W. J. Connell, Rep., and present member from the 1st district, and William A. McKnight, Dem., and F. A. candidate in the 2d district, over H. V. Harlan, Rep., are now conceded. The 3d district is still in doubt. Three candidates, Dorsey, Rep., Thompson, Dem., and Kem, F. A., are running neck and neck; and it will take another day and possibly two to ascertain which of the three is elected. James E. Boyd, Dem., for governor, carries this (Douglas) county by over 12,000, with 3 more precincts unreported, which will probably increase his majority to 18,000. It is doubtful whether Richards, Rep., will be able to overcome this in the rest of the state. The balance of the Republican state ticket is still in doubt. Reports on the legislature are incomplete. Latest returns indicate that prohibition is defeated in the state by over 40,000.

Republican Counties Turned Democrat.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 6.—Five counties Duval, Putnam, Volusia, Alachua and Marion—heretofore either wholly or in part Republican, give handsome Democratic majorities. The greatest revolution is in this (Duval) county, which heretofore gave from 1800 to 2000 Republican majority. The returns from the election show Democratic majorities of from 1100 to 1443, the latter being for Mabries for supreme court. This is a Democratic gain of from 2000 to 3333 for the various candidates. Putnam county, heretofore Republican, is Democratic by an average majority of 431.

The Democrats elect their state ticket by 16,000 majority. Mallory and Bullock, the two congressmen, have good majorities. The legislature will stand 99 Democrats to 1 Republican, the latter Senator Smith, who held over. Call's return to the United States senate is considered probable.

Tennessee's Vote.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 6.—Returns from the election are coming in very slowly, owing to the general apathy and delayed mail and telegraphic facilities. John P. Buchanan, Dem., for governor, will have between 20,000 and 30,000 majority over L. T. Baxter, Rep., and D. C. Kelley, Pro. The legislature is two-thirds Democratic in both houses, the Democracy having made gains in East Tennessee. The congressional delegation will stand Dem., 8, Rep., 2. The majority will be less than in former years owing to the registration and poll-tax laws, the Republican party being most affected.

Am Alliance-Democratic Vote.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 6.—Returns received at Republican headquarters indicate the election of Langley, Union Labor in the second district, over Breckenridge, Dem., and Featherstone, Union Labor in first district, over Cate, Dem. The Farmers Alliance voted solidly with the Democrats. If Langley and Featherstone are elected they owe their election to the Republican vote.

The Gazette (Dem.) says: "In Arkansas we have re-elected Cate in the 1st and Breckenridge in the 2nd district and restored a solid Democratic delegation."

The Situation in Michigan.

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—The indications are that the Democrats have elected their governor by about 10,000 plurality and the rest of the state ticket by a substantial vote. The Republicans concede only the defeat of their gubernatorial candidate. The state senate will be close, but up to the present time shows a Democratic majority of 3. The Republicans concede the house, which the Democrats claim by 15 majority. Last session both houses were Republican by good majorities. The Democrats have apparently returned their candidates in the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 7th and 10th congressional districts.

Democratic Majority of 40,000.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 6.—Returns from 400 precincts (one-fourth of the total number), give a net Democratic gain for the state ticket of 13,000. Newbourn, Dem., continues to make large gains in the congressional vote in the 2nd district. It is impossible as yet to predict the result there, as some heavily Republican counties have not been heard from.

The majority for the Democratic state ticket is estimated at 40,000. The congressional delegation stands 8 Dem. and 1 Rep. The legislature is largely Democratic.

Montana Vote Uncertain.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 6.—With all the counties heard from but 3, and allowing the Republicans the same majorities they had last year, Dixon, Dem., is elected to congress by 450 over Carter, Rep. The Democrats have elected 4 state senators and the Republicans 2, with 2 in doubt. The Republican state committee says it will require the official count to decide the congressional result, though it still claims the state for Carter by 135. The same committee claims the election of 5 Republican senators.

Missouri Democrats Get Everything.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—The Democrats send a full delegation to congress with one exception. They elect the state ticket and will have a large majority on joint ballot in the legislature. Returns are coming in slowly, and several days will elapse before the full and official vote can be given. The chairman of the Democratic state committee says that Wade, Rep., has undoubtedly defeated Fyan, Dem., in the 13th congressional district.

Washington Goes Republican.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 6.—Returns from 180 precincts give Wilson, Rep., for congress, 11,750; Carroll, Dem. 8500. If this ratio is maintained Wilson's majority will exceed 6000. The legislature will probably stand: Senate—Rep., 31; Dem., 3. House—Rep., 60; Dem., 28. It is thought that these figures will not be materially changed by complete returns. Several remote counties have not been heard from.

Democrats Gain in Delaware.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 6.—Complete returns from the whole state give Reynolds, Dem., for governor, 445 majority, and Causey, Dem., for congress, 514 majority. The next legislature will stand: senate—Dem., 5; Rep., 4; house—Dem., 14; Rep., 7. There is no United States senator to be elected. The Prohibitionists polled about 150 votes in the whole state.

Electoral Results with the Legislature.

HARTFORD, Nov. 6.—The Connecticut legislature is 10 to 16 R. p. on joint ballot. Total vote of the state (about 120 towns official) 135,374. Morris, Dem., has 67,061 and is 53 short of a popular majority. Official returns continue to bring in scattering votes, and it is evident that no election has been made. If so the legislature will elect Mervin, Rep.

"Peck's Bad Boy" Will Be Governor.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 6.—Latest returns from the state indicate a plurality of 30,000 and upwards for George W. Peck. The Democrats elect a majority of the assembly and the state senate. In the lower house they will have a majority of 30 or over, and in the senate a majority of 3. They elect 7 out of 9 congressmen.

How It Looks in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 6.—Complete unofficial returns on the head of the state ticket received by The Register, shows net Republican gain to be 5125 over last year. If this gain continues the Republican state ticket will be elected by 3000 to 6000 majority, with the possible exception of railway commissioner.

Returns from Virginia.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 6.—Lawson, Dem., is elected in this (second) district, over Bowden, regular Republican, and Maudslop, independent Republican, by 600 majority. Lawson is a member of the Farmers' Alliance.

The Dakotas.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 6.—In North Dakota the Republicans elected congressmen and state ticket by from 2000 to 4000. Scarcely any returns have been received from South Dakota, and nothing is known about that state.

Pawtucket Has a Republican Mayor.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 6.—It required an official count to decide the Pawtucket municipal contest, and Goodwin, Rep., is elected by 52 majority over Carroll and the scattering votes.

Republicans Win in Nevada.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 6.—Advices from various parts of Nevada indicate the election of Colcord, Rep., for governor, and Bartine, R. p., for congress, by majorities between 5000 and 6000.

All Republicans.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The Republicans have probably elected their state ticket and a majority of the legislature. The six congressmen are also probably Republican.

Nebraska Democrats 4000 Ahead.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 6.—Returns from 350 precincts in Nebraska show Boyd, Dem., for governor, 4000 ahead of Richards, Rep.

Missouri.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 6.—Fyans, Dem., has a safe majority of 1500 over Wade, Rep., in the 7th and 13th districts.

Learned Professor Dies Suddenly.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 6.—Franklin C. Hill, Ph.D., D. SC., curator of E. M. biological museum of Princeton college, died of heart failure. He had been failing for some months. He was a nephew of ex-President Hill of Harvard college, and spent several years in studying engineering at Harvard. As an engineer in the late war he rendered the country valuable service.

TWILIGHT TIME.

When the sunset lights are fading in the west,
And stars begin to gleam across the sky,
The tender twilight brings me peace and rest,
While, dear, to you my heart's best longings fly.

The miles that lie between us seem as naught;
Your form comes gliding softly to my chair,
And looking into mine with eyes love fraught
Your fingers wander kingly o'er my hair;

Your loving touch a benediction seems
That calls my nobler, truer self to life;
I long to realize my manhood's better dreams
And be a worthier actor in the strife.

With purifying love your dark eyes shine,
The last light lingers on your dusky hair,
And then you gently draw your hand from mine:
I glance to where you kneel—you are not there.

And so at twilight time my thoughts of you
Bridge over all the miles that intervene,
And bring you to me ever good and true,
With none to sever, naught to come between.

—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

QUITE IN THE DARK.

Blind men, however sharpened their remaining senses may become, would not exactly be selected as the fittest agents for the purpose in which I once found myself engaged. Still there is no knowing to what they may have to put their wits, and although I have no pretensions to being sharper than the rest of my fellow sufferers, or claim the possession of any special dodginess, yet there is no doubt when one has to rely very persistently on all one's faculties in order to keep fairly abreast of ordinary mortals it is wonderful how quick the apprehension and the power of drawing conclusions become. You are not concerned with the history of my infirmity—how I lost my sight and so forth—it is enough for the present purpose if I say that I have been blind for some twenty years—that I have grown quite accustomed and reconciled to my fate, and without making light of it have ceased to think about it, or regard it as interfering materially with the ordinary conduct of daily life.

Very well, then. I chanced some three years ago to be staying with some friends in their country house, not very far from London, but nevertheless situated in a delightfully rural and secluded district. My host and hostess lived in good style, kept much company, and entertained in munificent fashion. Most of their friends, too, were wealthy, and the jewelry, as I was told, which occasionally sparkled within those hospitable walls represented large sums of money. It was a thoroughly easy going establishment; meals were made movable festivals, to suit the varied arrangements which a constant programme of amusement sometimes entailed.

The month was August. The weather was fine and hot, and on the particular evening in question it so happened the dinner was to partake of the character of supper, to suit the convenience of the house party, who were going on some picnic boating excursion on the neighboring Thames.

Now, I did not join them for two reasons—firstly, because I wanted to enjoy the quiet and peace of the house, gardens and shrubbery when entirely deserted; secondly, because, always rather a bad sleeper, I had been more than usually wakeful for some nights, and I determined to go to bed early and take a certain narcotic which had been recommended as quite harmless and exceedingly pleasant. It consisted of a powder, and the directions said it was to be mixed with a pint bottle of light claret—a glass or two of which might be taken on going to bed or in the course of the night, if occasion required. Early in the evening I secured the wine from the butler, and myself mixed it with the drug by simply shooting the latter dexterously into the bottle. Then I shook it, corked it and stood it on the bed table, with a large claret glass, to be ready for use when I retired for the night. This I did, as I proposed, a little before 10, at which time I was the sole occupant of the house, with the exception of the servants. Their quarters, with kitchens, etc., lay at the extreme opposite wing from that in which my bedroom was situated.

Thus, as I crept up the main staircase with the aid of my stick, and by feeling the well known landmarks by which I am always able to guide myself after very little practice along passages and corridors, my footsteps echoed strangely, and I was conscious that an unusual air of solitude pervaded the place. Of course the autumn twilight had faded into night by this time, but that made no difference to me, and equally, of course, I carried no chamber candle. Somehow, nevertheless, I had a strange feeling of not quite liking the solitude—a sensation akin to nervousness, I suppose it would be called. Unaccustomed to regard myself as a coward, I yet could have wished that the house had not seemed quite so lonely. It was a vague, vain and ridiculous idea, I knew—still, the nearer I got to my room the more it possessed me. When I laid my hand on the lock for a moment it quite overwhelmed me, and I need hardly say that when I found the door resist my effort to open it my discomfort was complete. Then, after a moment, I pulled myself together, feeling heartily ashamed of the rapidity with which my heart was beating.

Another push at the door, and it opened partially—enough to admit me. Something had fallen inside and clacked it. I stooped to discover what it was, and presently my fingers lighted on a wedge shaped block of wood with a screw sticking partially through it. This had caused the jam. But what could it be? However, I left it on the floor, closed the door and walked slowly toward the window, knowing every step of the way nearly as well as you would with your eyes. The window—a French one—opening on to a small balcony, to my surprise was not closed, as I am certain I left it an hour or two earlier, when I brought up the wine to my room. You might think these little discoveries would have increased my nervousness; they had a contrary effect; at least every sensation was swallowed up in surprise and curiosity as to what could have happened.

However, I began to slowly undress—a blind man has to do most mechanical things slowly, if he would not be perpetually bruising or maiming himself, and so I went on for a few minutes fumbling about with my garments as usual, depositing each in its accustomed place, for only by that means are we incapables able to find any object with certainty again.

Suddenly I thought of the purpose which had brought me to bed so early, and began to doubt if I was going through a good preparation for giving the sleeping draught a fair chance. I had grown wider and wider awake every moment from that time when, ascending the stairs, I had first felt a sense of loneliness. Nevertheless I would take a glass of my light claret forthwith, considering that by the time I should be getting into bed it would be beginning to take effect. I stepped out in the direction of the table where it stood, felt about for an instant and the next had the bottle, within my grasp. Then I found the glass, and was proceeding, as I expected, to take the cork out, when lo! there was no cork. Raising the bottle, I instantly knew from its lightness that it was empty. This discovery was conclusive. Somebody had been in the room, perhaps was in the room at this moment, a most unpleasant notion, but I was no longer nervous.

"Who is there? Speak!" I cried.

"Who are you, and where are you?"

No reply. I listened intently; not a sound broke the stillness of the sweet autumn night. Taking my stick, I thrust it under the bed and round about in various corners of the room. The furniture appeared a little disarranged, but otherwise there was no evidence of the presence of any human being. Very strange, I thought. Anyway, I must ring for the footman—for I may say here that I dislike being waited, and beyond indispensable assistance prefer doing everything as much as I can for myself, especially in my bedroom.

As my hand passed across the corner of the table, it knocked something off on to the ground which rattled like tin and glass. Not stopping to investigate, the next discovery my sensitive fingers made on the table was some short iron tool. I took it up and felt it, but could not make out what it was, so proceeded to grope for the bell rope close to the bedhead.

Now, with all that had gone before, imagine my sensations when, as my fingers passed over the edge of the pillow on their way to the top of the bedstead, they fell upon a warm human cheek! Yes! the cheek of a man, as I knew instantaneously from his sparse beard, whisker, and hair! Imagine my sensations, I say, at that moment!

That I was startled beyond expression I admit, but I checked my impulse to shout aloud. I stepped back into the middle of the room, bumping against a chair or something in my haste. In two seconds, however, I collected my wits. Quick as thought almost I drew my conclusions and settled what to do. I went to the window, closed and fastened it as securely and as noiselessly as I could, for I had no desire to disturb the intruder, who so far, except for the warmth of his flesh, apparently showed no sign of life—my quick ear told me that. I stood still for a moment listening, and could not even hear him breathe. Then I crept to the door, felt for the key, which had been, I knew, inside, but it was no longer in the lock. By great good luck, just as I was debating on how I might secure the door outside, my foot trod on what I knew to be the key. It was lying close to that wedge like bit of wood with the screw which had first attracted my attention. I now guessed what it was; so, picking it up with the key, I passed out into the passage, softly closed and locked the door after me, and jammed the bit of wood in the crack beneath it. At least, I thought, whoever you are, you shan't get out this way. Then I made what haste I could along the corridor and down the stairs, rang the dining room bell, and in a few minutes had told my story to the butler.

He was for immediately rushing off upstairs to see about it all.

"No, no, Pitts," said I. "Wait a bit. Call two of the footmen and let them take up a position where they can see that no one leaves that room. Go out and get hold of two or three gardeners—anybody, and post them under the window. Then start off somebody from the stable to the village for the constable—for two constables, if there are two. Now quick's the word. The fellow is sound asleep, whoever he is, but we may as well make sure he is."

These orders were rapidly carried out, and in less than half an hour two stalwart policemen arrived. One joined the men under the window; the second, the head constable, went upstairs with the butler and me. He was the first to enter the room. I slipped in last to listen.

"Hullo, my man, what are you up to here? Come, wake up! Give an account of yourself."

A pause.

"Why, he is sound as a top still!"

"A noise as of shaking something—another pause."

"Oh, yes, of course, here's the little game—dark lantern rolled over on the floor, jimmy and crowbar, box of noiseless matches, etcetera-rarr, etcetera-rarr; I see. Here you! wake up. This 'ere kid won't wash; get up and come along with me quietly." Another shaking.

"Oh! you won't, won't you? Hullo, what's this? Oh! indeed—armed, ay? Yes, a six shooter in your breast pocket! Fully loaded, too, no doubt! We'll see to that a bit later. Ah! and a knuckleduster, too, by jigs. You are an ugly customer, and no mistake, you are! What a lucky thing you're so sound asleep—to-o-o be sure, and I'll make sure of you, my friend, while I've got the chance anyhow. These 'ere bracelets will fit you like gloves. There!"

A pause again; a little fumbling, followed by the audible click of the handcuffs.

"Call up my mate, sir, will you, please?" This, no doubt, to the butler, who, going to the window and opening it, shouted to the man below, who soon entered the room. Then I could guess pretty well what they did, which of course was to lug the fellow off the bed, thinking that would wake him, but, although he fell onto the floor with a heavy thud, it appeared to do nothing of the kind.

Then the thought suddenly flashed through my mind that he had drunk deeply no doubt of my particular brew; and remembering that the bottle was empty I trembled lest, having taken a half dozen doses of the fascinating mixture at once, he might never recover from his sleep. So stepping forward I stated my surmise as to what had happened and said, "You had better send for a doctor immediately."

"Well, p'raps so, sir," agreed the constable; "it would be best anyways, for he's about as heavy a bit of goods to move as I've come across for a long while."

Then they laid the huge, burly burglar on the floor, propped up his head and left him in charge of the officers till the doctor arrived. He did so just as my hosts and their friends returned from their excursion, and you may judge of the excitement that followed throughout the household.

The medical man, after due examination and suggesting certain douches of cold water, etc., reassured us all with the hope that he would not die. My assumption as to the cause of his coma was so feasible as not to admit of dispute. Doubtless, by aid of his dark lantern, he saw the bottle of wine with its label announcing it to be Medoc of the first quality. Tasting and trying, and finding it to be a light and agreeable fluid, he drained the bottle at a gulp, probably as the first step toward giving him the necessary courage and strength to proceed with the business of the night. In this he was probably interrupted by the rapid action of the excessive dose, and feeling himself suddenly overcome by a drowsy stupor had staggered to the bed and thrown himself helplessly upon it. The fellow had entered the room, of course, by the balcony, having hauled himself up with a hooked rope, which was discovered with the remaining tools of his fascinating craft.

At the expiration of some three or four hours, and in the dead of the night, he recovered sufficient consciousness to stand up, and he was then marched off between the two constables—looked up, and eventually punished according to law.

"On the whole," said the doctor to me later on, when we were laughing over the adventure, "on the whole, sir, it is a good thing for you that you tried the effect of the narcotic on some one else. Flat experimentum in corpore villi. Take my advice, sir, and don't resort to narcotics; they are always dangerous, and that must have been especially so. The drug clearly was a very powerful one. You have had a lucky escape every way, for if you had come in conflict with that gentleman—remembering how he was prepared—I am afraid he would have left his mark on you, whereas you have turned the tables, and, after a fashion, left yours on him. I wish the law would help you to make it indelible on his back with a good round dozen of the cat. It is the only way to put a stop to this armed business; it is the only thing these rascals dread. However, he will give blind men a wide berth for the future, I prognosticate, now that he has found one of them such a capital thief taker."—Chambers' Journal.

The Belgian Mines.

The mineral output of Belgium is given for twelve years from 1877 to 1888. In 1877 coal was raised to the extent of 13,669,077 tons (2,204 pounds), of 150,584,442 francs value, and in 1888 the total reached 19,218,481 tons, of 162,018,000 francs value. Iron ore diminished in output from 234,127 tons in 1877 to 185,542 tons in 1888; lead ore (galena) decreased from 11,542 tons to 414 tons only, while manganese ore, which was not produced in 1877, reached a total output of 27,787 tons in 1888; zinc blends, 26,310 tons; zinc calamine, 18,677 tons, and iron pyrites, 26,107 tons in 1877, declined in 1888 to 12,370 tons, 12,167 tons and 3,916 tons respectively. —Chicago Journal of Commerce.

CHANGEABLE STONES.

Peculiar Actions of Paradoxical Pebbles in the British Museum.

Among the thousands of wonderful things in the British museum none is more deserving of a description than the three little pebbles known to the geologist of that institution as the "changeable stones." The largest of the three is about the size of a cherry stone and of the same form, perhaps a little more ovate. Lying in its little glass case it appears to be perfectly opaque and of a yellowish color. Paradoxical as it may seem, it will scratch glass if it is drawn across it, but can itself be scratched with a common pen-knife. The various acids have no effect whatever upon it, but strange to relate, placed in water it soon becomes perfectly transparent and of a beautiful amber color.

The change begins almost immediately after the immersion at one end of the ovate in the form of a minute shot or bead, being in this way wholly unlike the two smaller "changeable stones," in which the transparency begins around the edges and gradually envelopes the entire stone. In the large one the little globe like spot increases by degrees until the stone becomes uniformly clear throughout. When removed from the water the end first to become transparent is first to become opaque, the dark colored globe gradually hiding the transparency of the whole stone.

Bergman, Veltheim, Magellan and Buckman, all voluminous writers upon the hydrophanes and other changeable stones, tell us that some of the steatites exhibit changes quite as astonishing as those shown by the three pebbles in England's great national curiosity shop. Buckman and Veltheim were the first to particularly inquire into the nature of steatite and stones of similar composition. Their report on the remarkable changes wrought upon a piece of steatite upon which they were experimenting may not be wholly uninteresting to readers who have a taste for the curious in its manifold forms.

It is as follows: "As soon as the stone was placed in the water we noted a peculiar musty smell, also that several air bubbles rose to the surface of the water. Soon the first stone showed signs of becoming transparent, then several others were dropped into the same vessel. Some of them became colorless as soon as they were thoroughly dampened; others took on a more or less deep yellow color; some acquired a beautiful ruby hue, and others still the color of mother-of-pearl or of a bluish opal. Whatever be the color of the liquid in which the hydrophane is immersed, it gains only its usual degree of transparency, with the color peculiar to it. When we look at it in its moist state we perceive a luminous point, varying in its situation as the position of the eye is altered.

The ancients also noticed the peculiar little luminous spot in the steatites and other hydrophanes, which was the cause of their calling such stones Oculi Mundi, they thinking the spot the image of the sun. According to Buckman, it is not the immediate picture of the sun, but a reflection refracted into the stone by the direct rays of old Sol, which may serve to remind us that the ancients knew a thing or two after all. —St. Louis Republic.

Electricity in Agriculture.

Some interesting electro-culture experiments described by Mr. N. Spooner have given results varying with the method of applying the electricity. Seeds of haricot beans, sunflowers and rye were soaked, electrified and sown, the plants thus grown attaining greater development and being brighter colored than those from untreated seeds, but showing no difference in yield.

Other seeds were placed in a plot between zinc and copper plates, which were connected by their upper surfaces so as to establish a current through the earth, and an increased crop and enormous size of the vegetables resulted. In a third experiment electrical collectors were mounted on insulated rods so as to give a highly electrified atmosphere. Rye, corn, barley, peas, clover, potatoes and flax were thus made to give an average increase of one-half in yield, and ripening was hastened. The potatoes grown were remarkably free from disease. —New York Telegram.

The Difference in Flag Stones.

Funny, isn't it, about these flag stones? Did you notice? After the rain—you can see it most any rainy day—some parts of the stone will be wet as can be, and other parts on the same level will be quite dry, as though they had been wiped with a rag just moist. Sometimes one flag will get your shoes all wet and the next will be a dry one. It's just a difference in the grain, that's all. This one is porous and the water is all absorbed, and the next one close grained and the water stays on top until it evaporates. —Interview in Detroit News.

A Wonderful Blind Man.

An ordinance in Sterling, Conn., exempts blind persons from taxation. Farmer Barbour claims exemption under the law, and proved to the satisfaction of an intelligent judge and jury that, though he could mow, hoe and load hay on a cart, he was stone blind. —Hartford Post.

Professor Pickering thinks that the term canal, applied to the marks on the surface of Mars, is a misnomer, and that there is no proof whatever of any one containing water. Had there been anything like a watery vapor his own powerful instrument would have developed it.

The visitation of D. D. G. M., Dr. C. P. Morrill to Tuscan Lodge, F. A. M., Lawrence, occurs Monday evening. Wor. T. K. Gilman acts as Marshal.

Our entire corps of teachers were present at the Teachers' Institute at Lawrence, Friday.

The newly arranged gas fixtures in the vestry of the Congregational Church were made to do service Sunday evening.

The topic for the meeting of the Y. P. C. E. of the Methodist Church is "Our Faultless Model."

At the public installation of Busy Bee Juvenile Lodge, at their last meeting, Mrs. Flynn installed the officers, and Charles Kelley and James M. Craig acted as marshals. A very pleasing programme was presented. A large number of visitors were present, who expressed themselves highly pleased with the way in which the lodge was conducted. An executive committee, also to act as a finance committee, was appointed; James M. Craig, Charles Kelley, and Harry Albertzette. A sick committee composed of Bessie Wilcox, Frances Ogden, Alfred Coates, and William Hubbard, was also appointed.

The Democratic rooster alighted upon Officer Sargent's flag Wednesday morning, and crowded lustily for Congressman Stevens, the successful candidate.

Wynona Lodge initiated two candidates Monday evening. The newly chosen officers will be installed by Lodge Deputy Rhodes, of Haverhill, Monday night.

Mrs. George A. Crosby and Miss Olive Crosby, of Manchester, N.H., were recent guests at the home of Dr. F. E. Weil.

725 persons visited the public room during October.

Rev. Wm. A. Keese of Trinity Church, Lawrence, will address the members of the Society of Christian Endeavor at their first anniversary meeting in the Congregational Church, Tuesday evening. President Herbert G. Johnson will preside, and call the meeting to order at 7:45 o'clock. Following the exercises in the church a social hour will be spent in the vestry. It is hoped that there will be a large representation present from the societies of Andover and West Parish.

Mrs. J. M. Whipple of Lancaster, N.H., is making a brief visit at the residence of Hon. N. P. Frye.

Mr. C. G. Gould, a well-known resident of the Centre, died at his home Monday night, about 12 o'clock, of heart disease, after about a week's illness. He was a native of town, a veteran of the late war, and for years followed the trade of a house painter. A widow and four children survive him. Funeral services were held at the late home on Andover Street yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. George Walker of the Saint Paul's Church.

Cheney's barge conveyed members of Merrimack and Adolph Lodge, K. of L., of Lawrence, to Lowell, Wednesday evening, and a pleasant evening was spent with Excelsior Lodge of that city. Among those present from town were Sir Knights A. V. Chalk, G. M. Webber, and Fred L. Sargent.

The Sons of Veterans are considering the idea of lighting a campfire, Friday evening, Dec. 5, in Odd Fellows' Hall.

Capt. H. P. Ingalls is improving slowly.

There is a call for more teachers needed to give their services at the sewing school, which opens to-morrow at the Methodist vestry.

Miss Virginia Stevens was elected one of the executive committee at the Unitarian conference held last week.

The Y.P.M.L.S.S. held a Halloween party, Friday evening, and the following programme was a leading feature of the occasion: Instrumental music, Miss Perkins; Reading, "The Professor's Cabages"; Reading, "The Professor's Cabages"; Miss Cheney; Reading of a scene from Hamlet, Messrs. Frisbee, McLean, Herbert and William Johnson; Instrumental music, Miss Marston. Refreshments were served after which the remaining time was spent in playing the various Halloween games.

At the annual meeting of Cochichewick Lodge F. A. M. Wednesday evening the following officers were chosen: W. M. John Barker; S.W., Frank Tisdale; J.W. George Perkins; Treasurer, John H. Sutton; Secretary, Charles F. Johnson; S.D. George A. Rea; J.D., A. W. Badger. The officers will be installed November 21st.

Stevens' Hill was thronged with a multitude of exulting Democrats, Wednesday evening, among whom were noticed many of the prominent party advocates from Lawrence and other places. A section of Battery C, fired salutes, the German band furnished music, and there was a generous illumination and display of fireworks. All were heartily received by the Congressman and supplied with abundant refreshment.

The Young Peoples' Christian League of the Methodist Church, at the meeting Monday evening, changed the name of the society and adopted the constitution and by-laws of the Epworth League.

Miss Mary I Baldwin will entertain the members of the Y.P.M.L.S.S. at her home this evening.

Tuesday was a perfect day, and called forth a large vote. Of the 724 registered voters, 613 presented themselves at the polls, and exercised the right of citizenship. At noon the ballot box registered only 146 votes, but most of the ballots were thrown by 3.10 o'clock. By vote of the meeting the polls were closed at 4 o'clock, and from this time until 10.45, p.m., the ballots were counted. The declaration of the result caused many surprises to the political circles. As will be seen by the vote, the "Samsons" of the tickets were Congressman-elect Stevens and Representative-elect Greene. Mr. Sutton also received a very complimentary vote, and was barely defeated in the district.

"No; but I've never known him to be satisfied with anything in his life."—Puck.

"Nostrilized."

"Are these mackerel quite fresh?" asked a lady of a ragged but pompous old colored fish peddler who came to her door.

"Oh yes, lady, puffedly so, puffedly so," was the reply. "Jess nostrilize them and see."

"Nostrilize" them? What do you mean by that?"

"Why, lady," said the peddler, with a look indicative of pity of her ignorance, "smell 'em! smell 'em!"—Youths Companion.

The half of our ills are imaginary; we are forever crossing bridges before we come to them, and which, indeed, we never reach. Oh! for the blessing of real contentment!

Doing, not dreaming, is the secret of success. Thinking out plans will not amount to anything unless the thought be followed by a determined will to execute.—Once a Week.
